

Local Ex-Banker May Never Be Sentenced To Prison

Accused Bank Embezzler Nelson E. Reichelderfer of Circleville may never be sentenced to prison or spend another day in jail.

The 68-year-old former executive vice-president of the Circleville Savings and Banking Company is scheduled for sentencing on Thursday, Sept. 7. But Federal Judge Mell G.

Underwood of Columbus said Tuesday that two physicians have filed statements with the court, saying that imprisonment might cause the former banker's death.

Judge Underwood said that the court will appoint a third doctor to examine Reichelderfer when he comes up for sentencing, and check the findings of the other two physicians. Reichelderfer's sentence depends on the recommendation of this third doctor.

The judge refused to make public the exact nature of Reichelderfer's reported illness on the grounds that it might cause embarrassment to the gray-haired, bespectacled man.

As Judge Underwood remarked:

"If you had something wrong with you, you wouldn't want it put before the general public, would you?"

Reichelderfer was arraigned and pleaded innocent last June 5 to three counts of making false entries and embezzlement. He was charged with making a false entry of $1,600 and embezzling $1,600 on Feb. 14, 1949, and with making another false entry of $3,125 on Oct. 25, 1948.

On June 22, the former bank vice-president changed his plea and admitted making the false entry on Feb. 14. The other two accusations were dismissed.

Judge Underwood said Reichelderfer was admitted to bail on the statements of Dr. Lloyd Jones of Circleville and Dr. M. D. Godfrey of the Clinical and Pathological Laboratory, Columbus.

Both physicians remarked that Reichelderfer "appears much older than his age." They described his physical appearance and outlined his medical symptoms.

Dr. Godfrey said:

"It is my opinion that incarceration in a jail or penal institution will accelerate these symptoms and in all probability bring about his death within a very short period of time."

Dr. Jones' opinion was virtually the same.

Judge Underwood commented:

"If anybody is going to die in prison, this court is not going to sign his death warrant. I have too much on my shoulders already."

Price Probe Called

Old Ohio Law Being Enforced

COLUMBUS, Aug. 29—Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy instituted a state crackdown on "artificially stimulated" price increases by invoking Ohio's 40-year-old, almost-forgotten, Valentine Anti-Trust Act.

Duffy appointed Cleveland Attorney Bernard S. Goldfarb as special counsel to handle the probe and said Goldfarb will start the investigation immediately in Cleveland. Duffy emphasized, however, that the probe will become statewide.

The attorney general said that "we are not going to make a witch hunt out of it," but insisted that "we want to find out if we have been having natural increases in prices or if they have been artificially stimulated."

Citing examples of increases, particularly on foods, Duffy asked for public cooperation and stated:

"If there are any outstanding overcharges we would appreciate being informed of the fact."

UNDER THE Valentine act, any "two or more persons" who conspire to create a trust—or according to Duffy's interpretation—to raise prices artificially, are subject to a fine of from $50 to $5,000, six months to one year in jail, or both.

If the conspiracy affects foods, the minimum fine is $500 while the maximum penalty is five years. Each day's violation constitutes a separate offense.

In addition, the attorney general can invoke two other forms of relief if he finds a violation has occurred. He can institute quo warranto action in the state supreme court to revoke a concern's corporation charter or licenses, or he can enjoin them from charging the increased prices.

Purchasers may institute action to reclaim double damages, plus legal expenses.

Duffy cited the Federal Commodity Index, based on the figure 100 for the year 1926, to show that prices had risen from 150.5 on Jan. 3 to 156.8 on May 30 and to 165.8 on Aug. 8—after the outbreak of the Korean conflict.

Mills Circus Not To Winter Here This Year

Circleville no longer will have the distinction of being known as "Circusville."

The Mills Bros. Circus, which has spent the last three winters on Pickaway Fairgrounds, will not return here.

Officials of the county fair board reported that an empty fairgrounds barn had been leased for next winter to the Thomas Joyland Shows, a carnival outfit which generally winters in Crown Point, Ind.

Fair board spokesmen said the carnival outfit will pay the board $1,000 rental. The circus paid $1,200. The carnival will have no personnel here during the winter, will merely use the barn for storage of tracks and equipment.

Board officials said the Thomas outfit made its offer and an attempt was made to get an immediate reply from the Mills Bros., but it was not received immediately.

A belated reply from circus officials said the troupe was steadily expanding and would need more barn and storage room than it had previously rented.

'HATE' CAMPAIGN STARTS

U.S. Formosa Policy Due For New Commie Blast

LAKE SUCCESS, Aug. 29—Russia is expected to launch a savage attack on United States Formosa policy in the Security Council today with a demand that the U. S. Seventh Fleet be pulled out immediately.

Soviet Delegate Jacob Malik, whose term as president of the Security Council expires Thursday, summoned the 11-nation body and placed the Formosa item on the agenda.

The Russian seized on the recent communication from Chinese Foreign Minister Chou En-lai demanding withdrawal of the Seventh Fleet from Formosa—which also contained a threat by Chinese Communists to "liberate" Formosa—to compel formal discussion of the entire question.

Warren R. Austin, chief American delegate to UN, took the wind out of Malik on Friday by giving the Council a seven-point declaration of U. S. policy on the island held by Nationalist China. He asserted there is no intention on the part of the U. S. to attack Formosa and strongly denied Communist China's allegation of "aggression" against China.

AUSTIN ALSO offered to submit to full investigation by UN of the Formosa situation, either in the Security Council or on the island itself.

Malik summoned the Security Council for this afternoon after a three-hour closed session in which the Russian maintained that all decisions taken by the 11-nation body from the time of the Soviet walkout Jan. 13 to July 15 should be stricken off the record because they are "illegal."

In the meantime there developed a Soviet-inspired "Hate America" campaign.

The keynote of hate against America was set in communications received from the Moscow-controlled Albanian government, and that of Communist North Korea and Hungary.

"The government of Albania expresses the deep hatred and indignation of the Albanian people at the brutal intervention of the U. S. in Korea, and vigorous protests against this criminal act of the American imperialist government."

Lewis Snubs No-Strike Pledge Idea

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—John L. Lewis declared today that his half-million mine workers will not be bound by any AFL-CIO no strike pledge to the government.

The United Mine Workers chief said his members are not ready to be "sold down the river" or have their rights "bartered" away by a three-man labor group advising Mobilization Director W. Stuart Symington.

Lewis sent a curt memo to AFL President William Green which said:

"The press chronicles you as plodding about the country seeking someone to whom you give a no-strike pledge.

"I am sure that you will pardon me when I suggest that the mine workers are not yet ready for you to sell them down the river."

"Restrict your pledges to your own outfit. We do our own no-striking."

Green, CIO President Philip Murray and Al Hayes, president of the Independent Machinists Union, are the labor members of a 12-man national policy committee which has been consulting with Symington on the war and defense program.

PRICE-WAGE CURBS AHEAD

Solons Threshing Out Bill On Emergency Controls

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—A compromise-minded House-Senate conference group meets today to thresh out a bill giving the President emergency controls over the nation's economy.

The session is expected to run late into the night with the chief fight raging over the method of allowing the President to apply price and wage curbs.

The House version would give him complete flexibility and permit Mr. Truman to put on the price control brakes item by item. The Senate bill would make it mandatory that he slam the inflation rise to an abrupt halt with full price controls over all goods and services plus the wage curbs.

Senate Banking Chairman Maybank, (D) S. C., will suggest this compromise to the conferees today.

The President could impose the controls "selectively," one by one, or completely, "across the board," as he sees fit.

BUT, BEFORE he would apply any price ceilings, he would have to consult a special advisory board consisting of representatives of industry, agriculture, labor and the public.

Mr. Truman also would be required to state a "finding" of why the curb was necessary. The advisory board would be appointed by the President but would be subject to Senate confirmation.

Wage control would be tied more tightly to price curbs, probably by either applying wage ceilings in an industry any time the product of the industry is controlled unless the President feels that the two shouldn't go together.

There is little or no conference disagreement over the other provisions of the controls bill which would give the President power to establish priorities, allocations and rationing of scarce items and to control real estate and consumer credit.

Maybank, who favors complete controls eventually, has pointed out that such a procedure would require setting up another OPA agency with 40 or 50 thousand employees.

He said that the need is too great for quick action to halt inflation for taking the time to organize such a program.

House Banking Chairman Spence, (D) Ky., and other House conferees have already said they would like to reach an agreement, but they insist that any such a compromise will have to abandon the "all or nothing" clause.

2 Battalions Head For Front

A SOUTH KOREAN PORT, Aug. 29—Two battalions of crack British and Scottish infantrymen landed at this South Korean port today and began moving quickly up to the battlefront.

First of the newly-arrived contingents to leave the port was the British Middlesex battalion. Together with its brigade headquarters unit, the battalion departed early Tuesday evening in a 13-coach South Korean train.

The sector for which the battalion was headed was not announced.

An American Negro Army band played "God Save the King" and "St. Louis Blues" as the Britishers stepped ashore from the Aircraft Carrier Unicorn and the Cruiser Ceylon which brought them from Hong Kong.

The first British troops to land in Korea—and the first United Nations ground forces to arrive to help American and South Korean infantrymen—spent as much time as they could mingling with American soldiers at the docks.

The Brigade's public information officer, Capt. Peter Munn, said:

"They don't come with a carnival spirit, but they are ready to go to work."

GOP Politicians Make Hay Of 'Gag' Of MacArthur

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—Republican campaign strategists claimed today that President Truman's "gag" on Gen. Douglas MacArthur handed them an election-year weapon that will pay off in November.

Congressional Democrats generally were silent, but GOP leaders on Capitol Hill loosed a blast of criticism against Mr. Truman's ordered withdrawal of a MacArthur statement urging defense of Formosa.

LONDON, Aug. 29—Princess Elizabeth today named her infant daughter Princess Anne Elizabeth Alice Louise. The baby princess has a brother, Prince Charles, and is third in line of succession to the British throne.

Sen. Knowland, (R) Cal., declared that the administration had "made a major issue out of what could have been a two-day story" if MacArthur's message to the Veterans of Foreign Wars had been delivered without intervention.

Sen. Brewster, (R) Maine, chairman of the GOP senatorial campaign committee, told reporters Mr. Truman couldn't have given his party more effective campaign ammunition.

"He's handing it to us," Brewster asserted with a grin.

"FOUR YEARS ago I begged the President to put General MacArthur in charge of the Orient. MacArthur knows Communists and the Communists know him."

"The history of that four years is the tragedy of not using his knowledge. Now he sees his duty, but the administration suppresses it."

Some responsible Republicans who remained silent joined with Democrats in stating privately that the President had "no choice." One GOP senator said the nation's foreign position cannot be determined by the views of "one theater commander."

U.S. Regains Lost Ground In South

Reds Pressing Taegu Campaign

TOKYO, Aug. 30—(Wednesday)—Communist and United Nations forces were locked in a bitter battle for the vital east coast port of Pohang today, but American troops regained lost ground in the south sector Tuesday.

In the Pohang zone South Korean troops recaptured the road junction of Kigye, but Red units were striking at the port from two sides.

One Red force hammered down from the north and was met by a South Korean counter-attack. General Douglas MacArthur announced early Wednesday they were making "slow progress against constant enemy resistance."

Another Red unit estimated at platoon strength executed a pincer thrust by throwing a roadblock across the main highway leading inland from Pohang.

MacArthur confirmed the recapture of Kigye and said reports indicated the enemy had withdrawn to high ground north of the town.

The invaders simultaneously resumed their heavy onslaught northeast of pivotal Taegu Tuesday afternoon after forcing South Korean troops into a four-mile withdrawal to within 16 miles of the Allied inland anchor base.

EAST OF THAT sector, other South Korean units unleashed a counter-attack seeking to regain a mile lost to Communist forces staging a southward drive designed to isolate Taegu from Pohang and the east coast.

Drivers Warned About Hogging Cross Walks

From now on it may prove a little expensive for motorists to edge their cars over the white cross walk lines in Circleville.

A crackdown on the practice has been promised by Safety Director C. O. Leist.

"Motorists who have to stop for traffic lights in the city had better make sure they stop behind the white line," Leist said.

"If they don't," he added, "they are likely to find themselves in mayor's court. The fine, I think, is something like $5."

Leist pointed out that the practice of motorists edging over the white lines is dangerous. He said:

"It is particularly dangerous when it forces mothers pushing baby buggies out into the stream of traffic. And when a car is hogging the cross walk, she either has to step out into the traffic lane or go back to the curb and wait another chance."

"Elderly persons find the practice troublesome, too."

Leist said the white lines are being repainted at the intersections on the following streets:

Court, Main, Mound, Pinckney, Watt, High, Water, and Scioto. Lines designating school zones are also being repainted, he said.

A crackdown on the practice has been promised by Safety Director C. O. Leist.

"Motorists who have to stop for traffic lights in the city had better make sure they stop behind the white line," Leist said.

"If they don't," he added, "they are likely to find themselves in mayor's court. The fine, I think, is something like $5."

Leist pointed out that the practice of motorists edging over the white lines is dangerous. He said:

"It is particularly dangerous when it forces mothers pushing baby buggies out into the stream of traffic. And when a car is hogging the cross walk, she either has to step out into the traffic lane or go back to the curb and wait another chance."

"Elderly persons find the practice troublesome, too."

Leist said the white lines are being repainted at the intersections on the following streets: Court, Main, Mound, Pickney, Watt, High, Water, and Scioto. Lines designating school zones are also being repainted, he said.

U.S. Regains Lost Ground In South

The roof of the United Nations defense rectangle.

The outnumbered Allied ground forces were strengthened by the arrival of two crack British infantry battalions which began promptly moving to the battle front in long trains from a South Korean port.

Sector by sector, in the order of their current importance, here were the latest front-line developments:

An Eighth Army field headquarters bulletin announced that "on the southern flank of the UN line, a U. S. regiment launched a successful counter-attack at midday which retook positions lost earlier this morning."

The counter-attack in the U. S. 25th Division's sector, defending the western approaches of the Masan harbor gateway to the keystone port of Pusan, was sprung after the Reds had made four sharp attacks.

Three of these were repulsed, but the fourth projected a wedge in the U. S. lines. This enemy salient was then erased by mortar, artillery and American infantry counter-action.

The South Korean Capitol Division reoccupied Kigye, eight miles west-northwest of Pohang, the second most important Allied-held port in Korea. This UN force, which had made a three-mile counter-advance to retake the junction, then pushed more than a mile farther north beyond Kigye, driving the Red Fifth Division before it.

The Eighth Army Tuesday night bulletin, announcing "general advances" by the Capitol Division, said, however, that the Communists still held heights overlooking Kigye from the immediate north.

The trend of this new fighting was not known at the time the field headquarters bulletin was issued.

An American briefing officer said the South Korean Sixth Division had lost additional ground Tuesday after retreating from fallen Uihung to a line running northeast to southwest through Hwabongdong.

The latter town is 16 miles north-northeast of vital Taegu. It is only 14 miles northwest of Yongchon, toward which the invaders were driving in their endeavor to outflank Taegu and chop it off from overland communication with the east coast.

3 Are Injured In Crash Of Auto, Truck

Three persons were injured and two hogs were killed at about 3:30 p. m. Monday when an auto and a truck sideswiped on Route 104 just north of Route 762.

Authorities said an auto driven south on Route 104 by David James, 50, of Chillicothe Route 1, was in a sideswipe collision with a truck being driven north by Carl Steinhauer, 25, of Clarksburg Route 1.

As a result of the sideswipe, the auto crashed into the bed of the truck, which had been carrying hogs to packers in Columbus.

The front end of the James auto was demolished in the collision, while the bed and rear assembly of the truck were damaged severely. Two hogs were killed in the crash and a third animal was critically injured.

James, driver of the south-bound car, suffered lacerations on both hands, left eye and lip; Mae James, 46, his wife, suffered a possible fracture of the left knee and bruises; and Joyce Brown, her daughter, suffered cuts and bruises on the face and body. The Chillicothe persons were treated in Mercy hospital, Columbus.

3 Are Injured In Crash Of Auto, Truck

Three persons were injured and two hogs were killed at about 3:30 p. m. Monday when an auto and a truck sideswiped on Route 104 just north of Route 762.

Authorities said an auto driven south on Route 104 by David James, 50, of Chillicothe Route 1, was in a sideswipe collision with a truck being driven north by Carl Steinhauer, 25, of Clarksburg Route 1.

As a result of the sideswipe, the auto crashed into the bed of the truck, which had been carrying hogs to packers in Columbus.

The front end of the James auto was demolished in the collision, while the bed and rear assembly of the truck were damaged severely. Two hogs were killed in the crash and a third animal was critically injured.

James, driver of the south-bound car, suffered lacerations on both hands, left eye and lip; Mae James, 46, his wife, suffered a possible fracture of the left knee and bruises; and Joyce Brown, her daughter, suffered cuts and bruises on the face and body. The Chillicothe persons were treated in Mercy hospital, Columbus.

Jeweler, 2 Aides Held In Series Of Burglaries

Formal accusations were filed Tuesday in Columbus against a jeweler and two men who allegedly profited in the looting of an Ashville jewelry store last week.

Charles Bissantz, operator of a jewelry store in Columbus, has been accused of receiving and concealing stolen property.

Eugene Waggoner and William Greenwald, both of Columbus, have been accused of burglary.

Columbus authorities said the men were held in connection with the burglary of six jewelry stores in the past, including Boyd's store in Ashville and the store operated by Bissantz. Two other men have been implicated in the thefts.

Boyd's store was looted of nearly $600 in rings, wrist watches and cigaret lighters in the theft. The men reportedly were caught while in the act of transferring the property to the Columbus jewelry store operator.

Weekly Wage Up $15.20 In Seven Years

Weekly earnings of the average Pickaway County worker increased $15.20 over the seven year period from 1943 through 1949.

According to a report released by the state Bureau of Unemployment Compensation, the average worker in Pickaway County earned $31.43 per week during 1949. By the end of 1949, the sum had jumped to $46.63 per week.

Largest hike came between 1946 and 1947, when the increase was from $35.05 per week to $40.53. Smallest jump was between 1948 and 1949. The increase then was 13 cents, from $46.50 to $46.63.

Last year a total of 2,620 Pickaway County workers earned $6,352,962. This is a considerable jump over the 1,816 workers who earned $2,968,156 in 1943.

Listed by industrial divisions, Pickaway County workers last year earned an average $54.90 a week in contract construction work, $53.21 a week in manufacturing jobs, $56.03 a week in transportation, communication and public utilities work, and $26.04 in service jobs.

Americans consume one pound of fish to 17 pounds of meat.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Dresbach of Circleville Route 1.

His new address is T-Sgt. Grover E. Dresbach, 98 Bomb Wing, Spokane, Wash.

Business Up Sharply Here

State Treasurer Don Ebricht reported that sales tax receipts during the week were $6,422.58, compared with $4,248.55 for the corresponding period in 1949.

Throughout the state an upsurge in the sale of tax stamps was noted for all classes of retail industry over the figures for 1949.

DOLLARS are a useful yardstick, as long as it is remembered what they stand for. When that is overlooked, they become misleading. That is why most Americans have been brought up short by the realization that the tens of billions of dollars that have been spent on national defense have provided considerably less military potential than Americans expected.

The fact seems to be that prices in the military realm have gone up even faster than civilian prices. In 1935, for instance, the keep of one soldier under peacetime conditions was $960 a year; now it is $2,640. His starting pay was $21 a month then; it is up to $75 now. And fighting equipment has gone up even faster.

A medium tank costs almost four times as much as during World War II. An anti-aircraft gun costs 30 times as much. A medium bomber costs seven times as much; pursuit aircraft cost more than three and one-half times as much.

The over-all picture indicates that costs in general have just about quintupled. Disregarding the keep of the soldiers themselves, it costs at least five times as much as it did in World War II to outfit an infantry division or an airborne division. It costs almost seven times as much for an armored division. The same number of dollars, in short, will put less than one-fifth as many divisions in the field.

These divisions, no doubt will have improved weapons. But sheer manpower is still an important consideration. The side with vastly superior manpower, moreover, is able to use infiltration and other guerrilla tactics, which go a long way toward neutralizing superiority in weapons. The United States is learning more about that and other things in Korea.

One of the best things which has been heard lately about Americans is that, according to the Columbia Broadcasting Company, the sessions of the United Nations meetings at Lake Success have become the most attractive program on television, surpassing even baseball. This refutes the old criticism that the people are not interested in anything serious.

The suggestion that tips should be made illegal has been made by a restaurant executive appearing at a congressional committee hearing on minimum wage laws. That would be harder to enforce than prohibition. You can no more prevent a tip for good service than squeeze one out for bad.

The automobile is described as a self-propelled vehicle. But it is disastrous to neglect a timely visit to the gasoline pump.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Huey Long once said that when Fascism came to the United States, it would be called by some other name, probably Democracy.

Huey Long was an unusually astute person with a keen, an almost clairvoyant grasp of other men's mentalities. This gave him power and caused him to be feared. No one feared the Kingfish more than Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Dealers. He saw through them with x-ray eyes.

Huey Long undoubtedly had Fascistic ideas and recognized that the day would come when the United States would be a controlled state. He wanted to be the controller. He experimented with Fascistic controls in the state of Louisiana and discovered that greed, cupidity, class interests played into his hands. It was possible to buy men's souls, not by bribes in actual cash but by giving them special considerations and advantages. Harry Hopkins had the same concept and did the same thing on a larger scale.

In fact, of the two men, Hopkins was the more cynical, for whereas the Kingfish was a little ashamed, Hopkins was as blatant as Mussolini and as shameless as Goebbels. He was a man without hope of long life and therefore embittered against a world that had withheld from him, for too many years, the advantages which he felt belonged to a masterful person. When he became a master, he set out to control a nation by corrupting its spirit first by fragmenting it into groups and then by making each group increasingly dependent upon the government.

Both Long and Hopkins died in their tracks, but Fascistic thinking has been continuous among our rulers since the NRA was attempted as a sharp move in the direction of a controlled society. The Depression and World War II gave a tremendous impetus to this tendency, because the same dislocations which gave the Bolsheviks their chance in Russia, the Fascists their chance in Italy, the Nazis in Germany, the Endeks in Poland, the Falange in Spain, appeared in the lives of the American people.

Fortunately, our traditions were still deeply rooted and Congress, with all its faults, became a stumbling block for the fascistically minded reformers, most of whom had falsely and malevolently chosen to call themselves liberals. It is interesting to note that whereas Republicans and real Democrats failed to grasp the essential character of this pseudo-liberalism, the Communists understood it, joined with it and sought to capture it. It was, in every instance, a pseudo-liberal who paved the way for Communist infiltration into the government of the United States.

Liberalism became a catch-all phrase not to describe those who believed in the increase of the freedoms of the individual man, but rather as the label for those who accepted the thesis that the expansion of the power of the government would produce the greatest good for the greatest number. Ultimately and to the disappointment of many who were genuine in their philosophic liberalism, all that remained was a doctrine of the expansion of government authority.

The Black Rose

by THOMAS B. COSTAIN

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

A WEEK PASSED, with the weather showing no tendency to moderate. One morning Walter awakened early and proceeded to make up the fire himself. He was sitting on the edge of the bed, looking at the slowly rising flames when the rustle of a curtain behind him caused him to turn his head. Maryam was peering around the edge of the curtain, her black curls still tousled from sleep. He realized with a shock that her face was several shades lighter than when she had first joined them.

"The stain is wearing off!" he exclaimed. The girl nodded her head. "I thought it was, but I have no mirror, and so I could not be sure. See?" She held out her hands palms up for his inspection. "They are much lighter."

"I hope no one has noticed it! You must apply more of it before you show yourself outside the tent again." "But I have no stain. It was Lu Chung who put it on in the first place." She added in a reassuring tone, "It does not matter. No one ever sees me. No one comes near us at all."

This was quite true. As she had said when he found her hiding behind the curtain, they were held in the utmost disdain by the rest of the caravan. They rode in the rear and they pitched their tent at night well outside the circle of the encampment. Father Theodore was their sole contact with the life of the camp, except for Walter's occasional games with the commander. The priest was always full of gossip that he never gave the servants a glance. The wily Lu Chung, not wishing to share in their difficulties, had not come near them.

"Come over here. Let me have a good look at you," said Walter. She obeyed by seating herself beside him and turning up her face to be inspected.

"By St. Aidan!" he exclaimed. "You are pretty." "I have been looking forward to the time when you would find that out, Kyrios Walter."

Tristram sat up and began to rub the sleep from his eyes. "What is it?" he asked.

"We will soon have a lily-colored second boy on our hands," answered Walter, getting to his feet. "I'm going to find Lu Chung and have him apply another coat of stain before we set out today."

Fortunately Lu Chung had risen early also. Walter found him beside the direction-finding chart, talking through the door in the rear to a very small and ancient Chinese. Walter looked curiously at the custodian of the mystery carriage, who was so weakened that his unsteady head seemed in momentary danger of slipping down through the gaping collar of his winter tunic and disappearing from sight entirely.

When they had drawn away to one side, Lu Chung said: "Honorable scholar is in trouble?" "Unworthy scholar has been in trouble for some time, but exalted Lu Chung has not deigned to come near him."

Walter proceeded to tell of the new complication. The giant nodded his head and agreed that steps must be taken at once to conceal the telltale condition of the runaway's skin. He was on the point of setting out on this errand when

Walter laid a detaining hand on his sleeve. "Could Lu Chung persuade this fellow to let me see inside of his chariot?" he asked.

"Few are about at this unseemly hour. Perhaps it would be agreed to. For a consideration to be shared with my ancient friend."

A coin changed hands, and the goldlike fingers of the man inside the vermilion wagon beckoned Walter to climb up. He obeyed with alacrity, finding himself in a dark hole which stank of body odor and a sickeningly acrid smell which, he was sure, was due to the use of a drug. The inside was so small that the attendant slept on a filthy pile of blankets under a table which filled more than half of the space. When his eyes became accustomed to the faint light, Walter saw that a white dish rested on the table filled with water and that on its surface a needle about six inches long was floating. He could see through the water that the bottom of the dish was decorated with two straight lines crossed at right angles. The needle pointed along one of the lines.

"Ting-nan-ching," said the old man in a quavering singsong. Walter was to learn later that this was the Chinese name for a magnetized needle.

A sense of awe swept over the Englishman. This, then, was the compass Roger Bacon had spoken of in their talk in the folly at Oxford. The needle oscillated slightly but never departed from the one direction. Above the table was a wooden lever with a handle. It was painted with all manner of mystic symbols.

The custodian, he decided, kept the handle set to correspond with the pointing of the needle, and so the arm on the figure above always stretched out to the south! Could it be as simple as that? He was so certain he had stumbled on the truth that he regretted deeply his inability to question the old man.

"I must learn all about it somehow," he thought. "When I get back, I must have all the details of this compass made for me. I will pass for use on English ships."

He was more puzzled over the function of a second lever protruding from the floor and so placed that any motion would sound a gong suspended beside it. The truth here came to him again in a sudden flash. This was the gong which sounded at the end of each day's travel.

"I believe," he said to himself, after some thought, "that the lever is attached to one of the wheels. They have calculated how many revolutions are used in going one li. At the end of this number, something moves the lever and the gong sounds."

As the old man seemed anxious to be rid of him, he turned reluctantly and lowered himself to the ground. The exhilaration he felt over what he had seen remained with him to the exclusion of everything else, and it was not until he reached their camping site that he thought about the plight they were in. The yurt had been taken down in the meantime and packed away. Maryam was already perched on the back of her camel, and he was relieved to see that her face had been restored to a safely dark shade.

That evening Maryam had been humming as she did her share of the work, and as she disappeared behind her curtain, she called over her shoulder, "Quickly, some hot water, Mahmud!"

The servant answered with a cheerfulness which pledged a new understanding between them, "Yes, Great Lady, plenty water soon." He proceeded to fill a basin with the largest part of their water supply.

"Taffy is using a new kind of mess on her face," explained Tristram when Walter looked at him inquiringly. "Lu Chung brought it this morning. It's made of charcoal and some other substance, and it can be removed at night. She is very pleased with it."

"Taffy?" "Well—Tristram came close to blushing as he made the explanation. Mahmud has always called her Tapha, and so I fell into the habit of calling her Taffy. It seemed a rather pleasant nickname for her."

"What is going on here?" asked Walter, seating himself by the fire. "This is going to be an occasion," answered Tristram. "Taffy is dressing up."

"Dressing up?" Walter took immediate alarm. "In what? Has Mahmud been thieving again?" "No. It seems she brought one dress with her when she ran away. She says she will now appear before us in all her glory like the Queen of Sheba."

Then Mahmud must stand guard outside. These courteous Mongols never ask your leave when they decide to pay you a visit. They walk right in. How would we explain the presence of the Queen of Sheba?"

They could hear the girl busying herself behind the curtain. Finally she called: "I am ready. Bow low before Her Royal Munificence!" A white hand swept the curtain back and she stepped forward to the center rug.

Even the revealing glimpse he had been favored with that morning had not prepared Walter for the change in her. Her eyes were shining radiantly. She bowed to them and then turned slowly so they could judge the grandeur of her dress from every side. She was wearing a tunic of white, covered with a rich blue damask which fitted her form tightly but flared out at the base with a split in front as far as the knee to allow freedom of movement. Over this again was a pallium of golden shade, most intricately embroidered. The collar of the pallium fitted snugly about her slender throat, and in the middle of it was a midnight-blue sapphire.

Tristram was drinking her in, his eyes shining with pride. "I told you she was beautiful," he said in a tone of awe. "I lacked your discernment," said Walter. "She looks like the lovely Empress Irene, come back to life."

Tristram protested at this. "Not an empress. I prefer to call her Queen Maryam."

They had spoken in English, of course, and the girl stopped her preening to demand, "What are you saying about me?" When Walter had interpreted, she nodded and smiled. "Queen Maryam! Was she a queen of England? Then I would much much rather be Queen Maryam."

Walter looked at Mahmud, whose eyes were on the point of popping out of his head. "Outside, boy! Keep a sharp eye and let us know if anyone comes."

Dr. Goldman

NEW YORK—Gallagher's, up in the West Fifties, is one of the town's celebrated steak houses, so naturally you order cold cuts as you sit there and eye the paintings of assorted Black Angus cattle, all looking the same, this hot summer night.

Later, you walk in leisurely fashion up Broadway, past the record shops, past the dance halls, past the used-car auto dealers, until you come to Columbus Circle, and then you veer past the Maine monument and set off into Central park, across the tired and rolling little grassy hills in search of the evening's band concert.

But it is early when you reach the mall. It is three-quarters of an hour before the white-haired Edwin Franko Goldman—hats off!—is due to step onto the podium, and there are only a handful of persons scattered around the gray, weather-beaten wooden benches. Darkness has not yet fallen, and you stand there, meditating, as eight sailors in groups of five and three come swinging up the wide promenade in search of amour. You wonder what the three in the rear guard hope to end up with, other than leavings, but as you wonder, they are past and gone.

You look off to one side and there appears to be a man-sized glade, full of grass and shade trees and no people, so you head for it. In its center, you take off your coat and spread it on the grass and then you lie on it and look up at the treetops and the darkening blue sky.

In the cocktail lounges, the commuters are having just one last one. Men are slipping uneasily into fresh shirts and white dinner jackets, that will be limp and wrinkled by midnight.

The period of working for work's sake has ended and Manhattan is getting ready for the second half of its long day, consisting of working for play's sake. Everywhere in the city, people have things to do—except you. You lie under the trees, in the full bloom of evening, and contemplate sleepily on the glories of shiftlessness.

But soon you hear the squawking of instruments being tuned, so you pick up the wrinkled jacket, brush the ants from your back and wander over to the row upon row of benches. This is the poor man's concert you are coming upon, costing nothing and in contrast to the rich man's concert up in Lewisohn stadium, costing a little more.

Both are sponsored by Guggenheims, who are among New York's great philanthropists, so they have much in common. You buy an orange ice on a stick from a vendor who is an amiable soul, and as you take a seat on a bench, you note that that appears to be the keynote of the evening: amiability.

Everybody is quiet and relaxed. The benches are almost full and there are several thousands clustered around the shell where the orchestra is seated. Can it be there are this many people who don't watch television?

GOLDMAN APPEARS, FINALLY, as he has appeared for so many nights in so many summers, and the band plays the national anthem and then gets down to business. It offers first its leader's Grand March, America, and then something familiar you don't remember. You get up and walk around to the back of the benches for a program, stopping to fight a 3-year-old child for the right to drink some city gin from a concrete fountain, and then you get back to your seat and unfold the program and discover that what they are playing is the overture from William Tell. Ah, naturalment. That's the band number you never can remember, just as Royal Garden Blues is the jazz piece you never can remember.

The band goes on and on, playing excerpts from Lohengrin, and you are about to turn to the guy at your right and comment on how fine they were, until he grunts and says, "Wagner at his worst." Well, it's a free world.

Finally, the band comes to intermission, and because you have other things to do, you straighten your tie and put on your jacket and leave the concert in the park behind.

You pass two of the eight sailors, and they are sitting on the grass with a couple of girls, and your faith in the Navy of the United States of America is reaffirmed. Then you walk slowly toward the lights of the city. The glories of shiftlessness are over.

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

Appropriations for defense will run about $30 billion this year and it is expected that by this time next year we will be safer and broker than ever.

Most of the money will come out of higher taxes on income and if that isn't enough they'll take the income and trust us for the taxes.

Then there's the $300 increase for each congressman for stationery to write the home folks. This year the mail will be heavy until November.

We have a letter from our congressman which says "anything you may have heard about me isn't true and I can prove it if relected."

You know there is some disagreement about the way Congress is handling matters these days. Some say Congress needs a vacation, some say a psychiatrist.

But the only psychiatrist we talked with says he wouldn't touch the job unless they agree to take out the desks and put couches in the House.

Bennett Cerf's

Try, Stop Me

John Mason Brown is probably the most popular lecturer in America today. New York's Town Hall gave him official recognition as such when it tendered him a gala luncheon on the occasion of his fiftieth—yes, fiftieth—lecture at that institution. Not only the usual throng of adoring females, but a liberal sprinkling of fellow critics, authors and producers elbowed their way into the jammed hall, and when they were called upon to say a few words their good-natured jibes reflected obvious affection—and sheer envy.

Alfred de Liagre wondered how the lad referred to lovingly in his youth as "Kentucky Mushroom" had been transformed suddenly into the most successful lecturer of the day. "The probable explanation," he concluded, "is that John makes the women of America think of all the things they haven't done with all the gentlemen they haven't met."

Bob Sherwood told how his attempted lecture tour began and ended in St. Louis. A local critic observed, "Mr. Sherwood looks like an undertaker—and is just about as funny." Sherwood agreed heartily and sent his manager a two-word telegram: "Tour cancelled." Louis Kronenberger, booked to replace Brown one season when the latter decided to visit England and France, never got started at all. He listened despairingly to one of John's more inspired performances, decided that angry ladies probably would lynch him if he tried to understudy, and sailed on John's boat.

WAR COSTS MORE

DOLLARS are a useful yardstick, as long as it is remembered what they stand for. When that is overlooked, they become misleading. That is why most Americans have been brought up short by the realization that the tens of billions of dollars that have been spent on national defense have provided considerably less military potential than Americans expected.

The fact seems to be that prices in the military realm have gone up even faster than civilian prices. In 1935, for instance, the keep of one soldier under peacetime conditions was $960 a year; now it is $2,640. His starting pay was $21 a month then; it is up to $75 now. And fighting equipment has gone up even faster.

A medium tank costs almost four times as much as during World War II. An anti-aircraft gun costs 30 times as much. A medium bomber costs seven times as much; pursuit aircraft cost more than three and one-half times as much.

The over-all picture indicates that costs in general have just about quintupled. Disregarding the keep of the soldiers themselves, it costs at least five times as much as it did in World War II to outfit an infantry division or an airborne division. It costs almost seven times as much for an armored division. The same number of dollars, in short, will put less than one-fifth as many divisions in the field.

These divisions, no doubt will have improved weapons. But sheer manpower is still an important military consideration. The side with vastly superior manpower, moreover, is able to use infiltration and other guerrilla tactics, which go a long way toward neutralizing superiority in weapons. The United States is learning more about that and other things in Korea.

One of the best things which has been heard lately about Americans is that, according to the Columbia Broadcasting Company, the sessions of the United Nations meetings at Lake Success have become the most attractive program on television, surpassing even baseball. This refutes the old criticism that the people are not interested in anything serious.

The suggestion that tips should be made illegal has been made by a restaurant executive appearing at a congressional committee hearing on minimum wage laws. That would be harder to enforce than prohibition. You can no more prevent a tip for good service than squeeze one out for bad.

The automobile is described as a self-propelled vehicle. But it is disastrous to neglect a timely visit to the gasoline pump.

These Days

Huey Long once said that when Fascism came to the United States, it would be called by some other name, probably Democracy.

Huey Long was an unusually astute person with a keen, an almost clairvoyant grasp of other men's mentalities. This gave him power and caused him to be feared. No one feared the Kingfish more than Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Dealers. He saw through them with x-ray eyes.

Huey Long undoubtedly had Fascistic ideas and recognized that the day would come when the United States would be a controlled state. He wanted to be the controller. He experimented with Fascistic controls in the state of Louisiana and discovered that greed, cupidity, class interests played into his hands. It was possible to buy men's souls, not by bribes in actual cash but by giving them special considerations and advantages. Harry Hopkins had the same concept and did the same thing on a larger scale.

In fact, of the two men, Hopkins was the more cynical, for whereas the Kingfish was a little ashamed, Hopkins was as blatant as Mussolini and as shameless as Goebbels. He was a man without hope of long life and therefore embittered against a world that had withheld from him, for too many years, the advantages which he felt belonged to a masterful person. When he became a master, he set out to control a nation by corrupting its spirit first by fragmenting it into groups and then by making each group increasingly dependent upon the government.

Both Long and Hopkins died in their tracks, but Fascistic thinking has been continuous among our rulers since the NRA was attempted as a sharp move in the direction of a controlled society. The Depression and World War II gave a tremendous impetus to this tendency, because the same dislocations which gave the Bolsheviks their chance in Russia, the Fascists their chance in Italy, the Nazis in Germany, the Endeiks in Poland, the Falange in Spain, appeared in the lives of the American people.

Fortunately, our traditions were still deeply rooted and Congress, with all its faults, became a stumbling block for the fascistically minded reformers, most of whom had falsely and malevolently chosen to call themselves liberals. It is interesting to note that whereas Republicans and real Democrats failed to grasp the essential character of this pseudo-liberalism, the Communists understood it, joined with it and sought to capture it. It was, in every instance, a pseudo-liberal who paved the way for Communist infiltration into the government of the United States.

Liberalism became a catch-all phrase not to describe those who believed in the increase of the freedoms of the individual man, but rather as the label for those who accepted the thesis that the expansion of the power of the government would produce the greatest good for the greatest number. Ultimately and to the disappointment of many who were genuine in their philosophic liberalism, all that remained was a doctrine of the expansion of government authority.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

A WEEK PASSED, with the weather showing no tendency to moderate. One morning Walter awakened early and proceeded to make up the fire himself. He was sitting beside the slowly prospering flames when the rustle of a curtain behind him caused him to turn his head. Maryam was peering around the edge of a him, her black curls still tousled from sleep. He realized with a shock that her face was several shades lighter than when she had first joined them.

"The stain is wearing off!" he exclaimed. The girl nodded her head. "I thought it was, but I have no mirror, and so I could not be sure. See." She held out her hands palms up for his inspection. "They are much lighter."

"I hope no one has noticed it! You must apply more of it before you show yourself outside the tent again."

"But I have no stain. It was Lu Chung who put it on in the first place." She added in a reassuring tone, "It does not matter. No one ever sees me. No one comes near us at all."

This was quite true. As she had said when he found her hiding behind the curtain, they were held in the utmost disdain by the rest of the caravan. They rode in the rear and they pitched their tent at night well outside the circle of the encampment. Father Theodore was their sole contact with the life of the camp, except for Walter's occasional games with the commander. The priest was always so full of gossip that he never gave the servants a glance. The wily Lu Chung, not wishing to share in their difficulties, had not come near them.

"Come over here. Let me have a good look at you," said Walter. She obeyed by seating herself beside him and turning up her face to be inspected.

"By St. Aidan!" he exclaimed. "You are pretty. I have been looking forward to the time when you would find that out, Kyrios Walter."

Tristram sat up and began to rub the sleep from his eyes. "What is it?" he asked.

"We will soon have a lily-colored second boy on our hands," answered Walter, getting to his feet. "I'm going to find Lu Chung and have him apply another coat of stain before we set out today."

Fortunately Lu Chung had risen early also. Walter found him beside the direction-finding chariot, talking through the door in the rear to a very small and ancient Chinese. Walter looked curiously at the custodian of the mystery carriage, who was so weakened that his unsteady head seemed in momentary danger of slipping down through the gaping collar of his winter tunic and disappearing from sight entirely.

When they had drawn away to one side, Lu Chung said: "Honorable scholar is in trouble?" "Unworthy scholar has been in trouble for some time, but exalted Lu Chung has not deigned to come near him."

Walter proceeded to tell of the new complication. The giant nodded his head and agreed that steps must be taken at once to conceal the telltale condition of the runaway's skin. He was on the point of setting out on this errand when

Walter laid a detaining hand on his sleeve.

"Could Lu Chung persuade this fellow to let me see inside of chariot?" he asked.

"Few are about at this unseemly hour. Perhaps it would be agreed to. For a consideration to be shared with my ancient friend."

A coin changed hands, and the clawlike fingers of the man inside the vermilion wagon beckoned Walter to climb up. He obeyed with alacrity, finding himself in a dark hole which stank of body odor and a sickeningly acrid smell which, he was sure, was due to the use of a drug. The inside was so small that the attendant slept on a filthy pile of blankets under a table which filled more than half of the space. When his eyes became accustomed to the faint light, Walter saw that a white dish rested on the table filled with water and that on its surface a needle about six inches long was floating. He could see through the water that the bottom of the dish was decorated with two straight lines crossed at right angles. The needle pointed along one of the lines.

"Ting-nan-chung," said the old man in a quavering singsong. Walter was to learn later that this was the Chinese name for a magnetized needle.

A sense of awe swept over the Englishman. This, then, was the compass Roger Bacon had spoken of in their talk in the folly at Oxford. The needle oscillated slightly but never departed from the one direction. Above the table was a wooden lever with a handle. It was painted with all manner of mystic symbols.

The custodian, he decided, kept the handle set to correspond with the pointing of the needle, and so the arm on the figure above always stretched out to the south! Could it be as simple as that? He was so certain he had stumbled on the truth that he regretted deeply his inability to question the old man.

"I must learn all about it somehow," he thought. "When I get back, I must have all the details so Friar Bacon can make compasses for use on English ships."

He was more puzzled over the function of a second lever protruding from the floor and so placed that any motion would sound a gong suspended beside it. The truth here came to him again in a sudden flash. This was the gong which sounded at the end of each day's travel.

"I believe," he said to himself, after some thought, "that the lever is attached to one of the wheels. They have calculated how many revolutions are used in going one day. At the end of this number, something moves the lever and the gong sounds."

As the old man seemed anxious to be rid of him, he turned reluctantly and lowered himself to the ground. The exhilaration he felt over what he had seen remained with him to the exclusion of everything else, and it was not until he reached their camping site that he thought about the plight they were in. The yurt had been taken down in the meantime and packed away. Maryam was already perched on the back of her camel, and he was relieved to see that her face had been restored to a safely dark shade.

That evening Maryam had been humming as she did her share of the work, and as she disappeared behind her curtain, she called over her shoulder, "Quickly, some hot water, Mahmoud."

The servant answered with a cheerfulness which pledged a new understanding between them, "Yes, Great Lady, plenty water soon." He proceeded to fill a basin with the largest part of their water supply.

"Taffy is using a new kind of mess on her face," explained Tristram when Walter looked at him inquiringly. "Lu Chung brought it this morning. It's made of charcoal and some other substance, and it can be removed at night. She is very pleased with it."

"Well—?" Tristram came close to blushing as he made the explanation. "Mahmoud has always called her Tapha, and so I fell into the habit of calling her Taffy. It seemed a rather pleasant nickname for her."

"What is going on here?" asked Walter, seating himself by the fire. "This is going to be an occasion," answered Tristram. "Taffy is dressing up."

"Dressing up?" Walter took immediate alarm. "In what? Has Mahmoud been thieving again?" "No. It seems she brought one dress with her when she ran away. She says she will now appear before us in all her glory like the Queen of Sheba."

"Then Mahmoud must stand guard outside. These courteous Mongols never ask your leave when they decide to pay you a visit. They walk right in. How would we explain the presence of the Queen of Sheba?"

They could hear the girl busying herself behind the curtain. Finally she called: "I am ready. Bow low before Her Royal Munificence!" A white hand swept the curtain back and she stepped forward to the center rug.

Even the revealing glimpse he had been favored with that morning had not prepared Walter for the change in her. Her eyes were shining radiantly. She bowed to them and then turned slowly so they could judge the grandeur of her dress from every side. She was wearing a tunic of white, covered with a rich blue damask which fitted her form tightly but flared out at the base with a split in front as far as the knee to allow freedom of movement. Over this again was a pallium of golden shade, most intricately embroidered. The collar of the pallium fitted snugly about her slender throat, and in the middle of it was a midnight-blue sapphire.

Tristram was drinking her in, his eyes shining with pride. "I told you she was beautiful," he said in a tone of awe.

"I lacked your discernment," said Walter. "She looks like the lovely Empress Irene, come back to life." Tristram protested at this. "Not an empress. I prefer to call her Queen Maryam."

They had spoken in English, of course, and the girl stopped her preening to demand, "What are you saying about me?"

When Walter had interpreted, she nodded and smiled. "Queen Maryam! Was she a queen of England? Then I would much much rather be Queen Maryam."

Walter looked at Mahmoud, whose eyes were on the point of popping out of his head. "Outside, boy! Keep a sharp eye and let us know if anyone comes."

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

Appropriations for defense will run about $30 billion this year and it is expected that by this time next year we will be safer and broker than ever.

Most of the money will come out of higher taxes on income and if that isn't enough they'll take the income and trust us for the taxes.

Then there's the $300 increase for each congressman for stationery to write the home folks. This year the mail will be heavy until November.

We have a letter from our congressman which says "anything you may have heard about me isn't true and I can prove it if relected."

You know there is some disagreement about the way Congress is handling matters these days. Some say Congress needs a vacation, some say a psychiatrist.

But the only psychiatrist we talked with says he wouldn't touch the job unless they agree to take out the desks and put couches in the House.

Try, Stop Me

John Mason Brown is probably the most popular lecturer in America today. New York's Town Hall gave him official recognition as such when it tendered him a gala luncheon on the occasion of his fiftieth—yes, fiftieth—lecture at that institution. Not only the usual throng of adoring females, but a liberal sprinkling of fellow critics, authors and producers elbowed their way into the jammed hall, and when they were called upon to say a few words their good-natured jibes reflected obvious affection—and sheer envy.

Alfred de Liagre wondered how the lad referred to lovingly in his youth as "Kentucky Mushroom" had been transformed suddenly into the most successful lecturer of the day. "The probable explanation," he concluded, "is that John makes the women of America think of all the things they haven't done with all the gentlemen they haven't met."

Bob Sherwood told how his attempted lecture tour began and ended in St. Louis. A local critic observed, "Mr. Sherwood looks like an undertaker—and is just about as funny." Sherwood agreed heartily and sent his manager a two-word telegram: "Tour cancelled." Louis Kronenberger, booked to replace Brown one season when the latter decided to visit England and France, never got started at all. He listened despairingly to one of John's more inspired performances, decided that angry ladies probably would lynch him if he tried to understudy, and sailed on John's boat.

Dr. Goldman

NEW YORK—Gallagher's, up in the West Fifties, is one of the town's celebrated steak houses, so naturally you order cold cuts as you sit there and eye the paintings of assorted Black Angus cattle, all looking the same, this hot summer night.

Later, you walk in leisurely fashion up Broadway, past the record shops, past the dance halls, past the used-car auto dealers, until you come to Columbus Circle, and then you veer past the Maine monument and set off into Central park, across the tired and rolling little grassy hills in search of the evening's band concert.

But it is early when you reach the mall. It is three-quarters of an hour before the white-haired Edwin Franko Goldman—hats off!—is due to step onto the podium, and there are only a handful of persons scattered around the gray, weather-beaten wooden benches. Darkness has not yet fallen, and you stand there, meditating, as eight sailors in groups of five and three come swinging up the wide promenade in search of amour. You wonder what the three in the rear guard hope to end up with, other than leavings, but as you wonder, they are past and gone.

You look off to one side and there appears to be a man-sized glade, full of grass and shade trees and no people, so you head for it. In its center, you take off your coat and spread it on the grass and then you lie on it and look up at the treetops and the darkening blue sky.

AT THAT MOMENT, SOMEWHERE IN NEW YORK, a visiting movie actress is slipping off her shoes, lying for five precious moments on the bed in her hotel suite and calling into the phone for room service to bring up a double Scotch quick, for Pete's sake, against the full evening of night clubs and drinking that lies ahead of her.

In the cocktail lounges, the commuters are having just one last one. Men are slipping uneasily into fresh shirts and white dinner jackets, that will be limp and wrinkled by midnight.

The period of working for work's sake has ended and Manhattan is getting ready for the second half of its long day, consisting of working for play's sake. Everywhere in the city, people have things to do—except you. You lie under the trees, in the full bloom of evening, and contemplate sleepily on the glories of shiftlessness.

But soon you hear the squawking of instruments being tuned, so you pick up the wrinkled jacket, brush the ants from your back and wander over to the row upon row of benches. This is the poor man's concert you are coming upon, costing nothing and in contrast to the rich man's concert up in Lewisohn stadium, costing a little more. Both are sponsored by Guggenheims, who are among New York's great philanthropists, so they have much in common. You buy an orange ice on a stick from a vendor who is an amiable soul, and as you take a seat on a bench, you note that that appears to be the keynote of the evening: amiability.

Everybody is quiet and relaxed. The benches are almost full and there are several thousands clustered around the shell where the orchestra is seated. Can it be there are this many people who don't watch television?

GOLDMAN APPEARS, FINALLY, as he has appeared for so many nights in so many summers, and the band plays the national anthem and then gets down to business. It offers first its leader's Grand March, America, and then something familiar you don't remember. You get up and walk around to the back of the benches for a program, stopping to fight a 3-year-old child for the right to drink some city gin from a concrete fountain, and then you get back to your seat and unfold the program and discover that what they are playing is the overture from William Tell. Ah, naturalism. That's the band number you never can remember, just as Royal Garden Blues is the jazz piece you never can remember.

The band goes on and on, playing excerpts from Lohengrin, and you are about to turn to the guy at your right and comment on how fine they were, until he grunts and says, "Wagner at his worst." Well, it's a free world.

Finally, the band comes to intermission, and because you have other things to do, you straighten your tie and put on your jacket and leave the concert in the park behind.

You pass two of the eight sailors, and they are sitting on the grass with a couple of girls, and your faith in the Navy of the United States of America is reaffirmed. Then you walk slowly toward the lights of the city. The glories of shiftlessness are over.

Marriage Report Labeled False By Principal Parties

The Circleville Herald Monday incorrectly reported the announcement of a marriage that supposedly occurred Tuesday in Greenup, Ky. Both "bride and groom," Barbara Watson and James Ramey, deny the facts in the story. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Watson, deny any knowledge of the announcement and say that the Rev. R. B. Allen of Greenup, Ky., who reportedly officiated at the ceremony has denied that he read the service for such a couple.

The information concerning this reported marriage was telephoned to The Herald by an unidentified and unscrupulous "friend" of the family.

There are a few persons in every community who consider it a great "joke" to make such false reports public. Such a sense of humor is perverted.

The Herald, fully aware of the embarrassment caused the families involved, is happy to make this correction for the sake of truthful reporting.

Three Couples Observe Wedding Anniversaries At Sunday Dinner Fete

Paul Johnsons Host Affair

Three wedding anniversaries were celebrated Sunday at a dinner party held in Pickaway Arms at which Mr. and Mrs. Paul Johnson of Northridge road were hosts.

The event was held in observance of the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Orr of near Chillicothe, the 24th anniversary of the Johnsons and the 23rd anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson Bitzer of Grandview. Mrs. Bitzer and Mr. Orr are the sister and brother of Mrs. Johnson.

Dinner was served at one long table on the porch and a smaller table for the young people in the house, to 34 members of the immediate families.

Arrangements of asters centered the tables. Three cakes with wedding dates in pastel frosting were cut and served by Mrs. Orr, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Bitzer.

Guests spent the afternoon in the Johnson home.

Among those attending the affair were:

Mrs. E. P. Maxwell, Theodore Maxwell, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Maxwell, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Peterson and son, Bobby, Rosemary and Clarkson Bitzer Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Paul Barrett and children, Paul, Sheila and Scott of Columbus;

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley L. Orr Jr. of Cleveland; Marcus Orr, Thoburn Orr and Lowell Orr of Chillicothe community; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Risinger, Mrs. W. K. Orr, Mrs. Elizabeth Bennet and daughter, Jane, of Kingston; Miss Carrie E. Johnson, Davis Allen, Bob Johnson, Martha Sue Johnson and Mary Anne Johnson of Circleville.

Picnic Supper Is Given For 1st EUB Group

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Radcliffe of Northridge road were hosts at a picnic supper Sunday night held on the lawn of their home for 18 members and nine guests of Home Builder's class of First Evangelical United Brethren church.

Centering the table was a cake on which the words "Welcome Back" were written on the frosting. It had been baked and decorated by Mrs. Marvin Jenkins in honor of the Rev. and Mrs. Carl Wilson who returned from conference to serve another year in Circleville.

Plans were made for a "thin dime" supper to be held this Fall with Mrs. Radcliffe as general chairman. On her committee will be Mrs. Nolan Sims Jr., Mrs. Forrest Schlegler, Mrs. Joe Gitt and Mrs. Owen Pullen.

Ticket committee is comprised of Marvin Jenkins and Edwin Richardson.

Mrs. Edwin Richardson will head the diningroom committee. She will be assisted by Mrs. Eugene Richardson and Mrs. Raymond Reichelderfer.

Class members also decided to hold an attendance contest during the next three months. Forrest Schlegler and Edwin Richardson will serve as captains. Contest losers will provide a ham supper for winners.

Horseshoes, croquet and social visiting were entertainment following the chicken supper and business meeting.

First EUB Plans Honor Rally For Its Minister

New Christian Service Center of First Evangelical United Brethren church will be the setting for the reception and rally given in honor of the Rev. and Mrs. Carl Wilson, Sept. 28, according to plans made at Thursday meeting of First EUB Ladies Aid and Service Circle. Mrs. C. O. Kerns was hostess to the group in her home on West Union street.

The service center, though not entirely completed, will be in readiness for the September rally.

Mrs. Paul Dawson, president, named Mrs. Frank Hawkes as head of the program committee for the September rally. Serving with Mrs. Hawkes will be Mrs. Clarence Radcliffe and Mrs. James Trimmer.

Readings were the feature of the program Thursday evening. They were presented by Mrs. John Stevenson, Mrs. John Kerns, Mrs. C. O. Kerns and Mrs. Hawkes.

Refreshments were served by Ruth Circle.

Marriage Report Labeled False By Principal Parties

The Circleville Herald Monday incorrectly reported the announcement of a marriage that supposedly occurred Tuesday in Greenup, Ky. Both "bride and bridegroom," Barbara Watson and James Ramey, deny the facts in the story. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Watson, deny any knowledge of the announcement and say that the Rev. R. B. Allen of Greenup, Ky., who reportedly officiated at the ceremony has denied that he read the service for such a couple.

The information concerning this reported marriage was telephoned to The Herald by an unidentified and unscrupulous "friend" of the family.

There are a few persons in every community who consider it a great "joke" to make such false reports public. Such a sense of humor is perverted.

The Herald, fully aware of the embarrassment caused the families involved, is happy to make this correction for the sake of truthful reporting.

FOR HER HOME, HER FAMILY AND HERSELF

for the Fall outfit. Bangles might be horse shoes, hearts, stirrups, footballs, basketballs, 4 leaf clovers. Another Fall novelty is the key and heart locket that sells for $4.95 and up at L. M. BUTCH CO., JEWELERS. Earrings and chokers are other items that warm the heart of the girls who go away to school. They sell from $1.25 up.

THAT TIME will be here before you realize it and greetings will ring in the air—if you expect to fully enjoy it and really get the true spirit of the Christmas time you will begin now to prepare for it. Drop into BOYDS INC. and select your gift from the array of electrical items—toasters irons, coffee makers, mixers, French friers and many others. Too there is the ever popular gift of Revere Ware—a small down payment will hold any article for you and your gift problems will be so much lessened. Your budget will not be over taxed with the small monthly or weekly payments.

OLD JACK FROST is quite a painter and his magic touch seems to be evident on the glassware that HARPSTER & YOST are displaying at a very minimum price. For instance you can get 4 beautifully etched sherberts for $2.50 also 4 matching goblets for the same price and for only $1.50 there are 4 tumblers and 4 ice tea glasses at the same price. In addition 4 small beer bowls cost only $1.50. A really handsome glassware set at a very low price, one you would like to own or would make a beautiful gift.

SOME PERSONS like to stand on the side lines and tell how the game should be played and make comments about it but most folk today prefer to sit at home and watch it over TELEVISION. If you do not have a set stop into HOOVER MUSIC STORE and see the sets that are available. Terms can be arranged for the purchase and life is so short to be without a television set today. Act now—the time may come all too soon when they will not be available.

PRACTICALLY the only rival for modern TIEMPO Franciscan Ware is an Autumn leaf painted by Nature. The beautiful simplicity of line in square modern shapes combined with entirely new and sparkling colors makes Tiempo the dinnerware that is outstanding. The colors are planned to fit into the new decorator schemes and are so basically excellent that each alone is perfect, yet any two or three—even all four may be combined at will. The simple smartness of Tiempo makes it correct for formal as well as informal arrangements. All Franciscan Ware is extremely resistant to crazing, chipping or cracking. L. M. BUTCH CO., JEWELERS.

The beautiful simplicity of line in square modern shapes combined with entirely new and sparkling colors makes Tiempo the dinnerware that is outstanding. The colors are planned to fit into the new decorator schemes and are so basically excellent that each alone is perfect, yet any two or three—even all four may be combined at will. Rough Bosox Are Menace To AL Race

11-Run Deficit Bothers Little

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 — Those ruthless Boston Red Sox have ceased to be a threat to the other American League contenders — they have become a downright menace.

The Red Soxers still have a long, wearying road trip ahead of them in their amazing uphill fight, and their idea seems to be to get as close as possible to the top before hitting the road.

They carried the strategy to the 11th degree yesterday by coming from 11 runs behind to trip Cleveland, 15 to 14. That was the Red Sox' 13th victory in 14 games on the current home stand.

By winning, they gained a full game on each of their rivals and now are only three games from first-place Detroit, only one game behind third-place Cleveland.

And for the next three days, at least, the schedule is all to the Bostonians' advantage. Having smeared both the Tigers and Indians, the Red Sox now engage the less potent Chicago White Sox.

MEANWHILE, Cleveland and the New York Yankees open a pivotal four-game series with a doubleheader today in New York. It is billed as a battle for second place, but it could work to the disadvantage of both the Tribe and the Yankees.

While they are battering each other, the Bosox may well overhaul one or both of them.

At the same time, the Tigers will be in Washington and should pick up some ground.

Cleveland came out of Boston groggy from an unbelievably horrible episode. After blowing a seven-run lead Sunday, the Indians were unable to hold a 12-to-1 advantage yesterday.

To make matters worse, the Red Sox clubbed Bob Lemon and Bob Feller as impartially as they did such lesser operatives as Al Benton and Steve Gromek.

Lemon departed during an eight-run rally in the fourth, and Feller was collared with the loss when the Sox scored their final four runs in the eighth.

Both the Yankees and the Tigers lost. Ray Scarborough's sixth pitch in the 12th victory and Ozark Zernial's 21st homer were the principal ingredients of the White Sox' 6-to-4 defeat of the Yankees.

Little Bobby Shantz weathered homers by Johnny Groth and Bob Swift in the last two innings to pitch Philadelphia to a 4-to-3 triumph over Detroit. Elmer Valo hit a round-tripper for the A's.

In a night game of little consequence, Washington topped the St. Louis Browns, 9 to 3.

THE PHILADELPHIA Phillies split a doubleheader and still gained half a game in the National League chase. Three consecutive homers by Big Hank Sauer gave the Chicago Cubs a 7-to-5 win over Curt Simmons of the Phils in the opener.

Sauer's homers brought his seasonal total to 26. He has hit

Table Tennis Demonstration Given Club

Sports fare provided an unusual program for Circleville Kiwanis Club Monday evening. Held in Pickaway Country Club, the program was presented by the visiting Columbus Hilltop Kiwanis Club.

In the afternoon, two four-somes toured the local golf course. Prizes of golf balls went to all Hilltop Kiwanians—except one.

He (unidentified) chalked up the largest score, was presented with the booby prize—a white cane, tin cup, dark glasses and a "seeing eye dog."

Main talk during the evening dinner meeting was made by Carl Rose, head football coach for Capital University.

Rose highly praised Circleville's standout football player, Harold (Sandy) Hill, said that this city should be proud of the backing it gives local sports.

HE CITED the fact that Circleville led all out-of-town ticket sales to the recent Ohio All-Star high school football contest in Toledo.

Second half of the program was a demonstration of professional brand table tennis. Demonstrators were two Columbus men, Dr. Harry Sage Jr. and Guy Blair Jr.

Sage is former Canadian Open champion, is a past Ohio state champion and ranks 23rd in the nation. Blair is a former Ohio champion and ranks sixth in the U. S.

City Teacher Gives Lessons In Ringer Match

Teacher Bob Friece of Circleville so far dominates the field in the Pickaway Country Club "ringer" tournament.

Friece, elementary teacher in the city school system, so far has turned in a five-under-par card for his first five holes in the unique tournament.

The "ringer" tourney consists of nine rounds of golf for each contestant. The contestant must pick his lowest score for any one hole in each of the nine rounds to complete his card.

Manager-pro Ed Amey said Friece turned in an eagle on number five hole, although registering only a par for number eight. The teacher birdied the remaining three holes on his card.

Amey said that about 40 men and women have entered the tournament to date. The contest is in two divisions, one for the men and the other for women.

seven in the last five days. Wayne Terwilliger of the Cubs and Andy Seminick of Philadelphia also homered.

Jim Konstanty won his 12th decision in relief of Russ Meyer as the Phils took the nightcap, 9 to 5. Del Ennis blasted his 28th homerun for the Phils, and Andy Parko hit his 31st for Chicago.

The Brooklyn Dodgers slipped 5½ games off the pace by dropping a 3-to-1 contest to Gerry Staley of the St. Louis Cardinals. Preacher Roe laid in homerun pitches to Del Rice, Tommy Glaviano and Stan Musial.

Roe, who missed his 18th victory, now has thrown 28 gopher balls for the Dodgers this season—20 of them with the bases empty.

Catcher Homer Howell pelted one over the fence in the ninth inning to give Cincinnati a 3-to-2 triumph over the New York Giants. Ewell Blackwell, who gave up six hits in outpitching Dave Koslo, posted his 13th win.

Top Hatters Ousted From State Match

Locals Lose By 2-1 Margin

Circleville's Top Hat softball team was eliminated from the state softball championship tournament Monday in Toledo.

The Hatters were knocked out of competition when Toledo handed them a 2-1 defeat in extra innings of play in the quarterfinals of the losers' bracket.

The local aggregation had advanced into the semi-finals of the winners' bracket in the tourney before tasting its first defeat to be cast into the lower bracket.

Top Hat scored a 1-0 advantage in its final game Monday in the sixth frame with a single tally, although Toledo made a desperation attempt in the seventh to knot the score at 1-all with a single marker.

Neither team was able to connect during the first extra inning of the tilt, although Toledo closed the books on the Hatters with another single in the ninth frame for the victory.

CIRCLEVILLE, on paper, outshined the victors: outpitching Toledo 7-6; committing only one error while Toledo bobbled twice; and suffering only five strikeouts while Toledo suffered nine.

Pitcher Stillman Morrison was credited with the nine fannings, while Leon Sims rapped out a triple and Snap Ankrom and Wilson Clark connected for doubles for three of the four extra base hits of the game.

Line score of the photo-finish encounter follows:

Hatters	000	001	000	1	7	1

Two Circleville women were to have teed off early Tuesday at Pickaway Country Club for women's club championship golf title.

Three of the races on yesterday's opening fair program went to straight-heat winners. Single See took the 2:23 pace, James K. Abbe won in the free-for-all pace, and Hi-Los Apollo snared the 2:22 trot.

Brownies All Pent Up For Bears Battle

BOWLING GREEN, Aug. 29 — Rookies will be forgotten when the Cleveland Browns crash into the Chicago Bears in Cleveland Stadium Friday night.

Although the game is listed as an exhibition, both teams are preparing as if the National Football League title depended on the final score.

The Browns, now in their sixth week at their Bowling Green training camp, have merely been getting into condition until now. They rolled over three opponents in previous exhibitions but the Chicago game is regarded as a real test of how good the Browns really are.

Tim Temmerario, end coach and chief scout for the Brownies, was impressed with the "keyed up" feeling among the players when he returned to camp after a five day scouting trip.

Over in the Bears' camp near Rensselaer, Ind., Clyde "Bulldog" Turner, labeled by many observers the greatest center of all time, usually sits out the exhibition schedule.

But, he will probably make his first start of the season against the Browns Friday night.

At 31, Turner is a veteran of 10 years with the Bears, and center on the all-time, All-America team chosen in a nationwide poll in 1946.

Tommy O'Malley, rookie Cleveland quarterback from Cincinnati, has been sent to the Green Bay Packers. The Browns are now down to 37, five players over the National League limit.

It is estimated that on a typical Summer day, 23 million Americans have iced tea with dinner.

Many Local Checks To Be Hiked

Additions Due To Be Made

In the next few days Pickaway Counties will be among 190,950 residents of Ohio to be notified by mail of the increase in their monthly old-age and survivors insurance payments under the new social security law signed by President Truman Monday.

J. K. Johnson, regional director of the Federal Security Agency in Cleveland, explained that the checks these people will receive early in October, covering the month of September, will be for the increased amount.

Figures supplied by the FSA regional office show that monthly old age and survivors insurance payments to Ohio residents for August total $4,141,889. Under the new benefit rates this monthly total is expected to rise to $7,440,359.

According to FSA estimates, some 23,000 agricultural workers, 242,000 non-farm self-employed persons, and 46,200 domestic workers in Ohio will be covered in January, 1951, when the new coverage provisions become effective.

IN ADDITION, about 50,500 employees of the state and its political subdivisions who are not now covered by retirement plans may become eligible for coverage under the old-age and survivors insurance system.

Emphasizing that the total number of newly-covered workers in Ohio will be somewhat higher than indicated by the above estimates, Johnson pointed out that these estimates do not include certain groups of salesmen and other individuals newly covered through a more liberal definition of "employee."

Under a bill signed by President Truman, a number of previously unaffected Pickaway Counties will be covered in 1951 by social security.

Eligible for Social Security benefits under the new legislation are household workers, self-employed persons and farm workers.

Included in household workers are maids, cooks, laundresses, butlers, gardeners, practical nurses and others who work in private homes.

If household workers make $50 or more in cash in a three-month period, and if they are employed either full or part time on 24 or more days for that employer during a three-month period or the three-month period just before it, then the work counts toward Social Security.

THE THREE-MONTH periods used as a test are consecutive quarters of the year; for example, January, February and March.

A farm worker is covered under the new law if he is a regular worker for five months or more for one farm operator.

Work after Jan. 1, 1951 will generally be counted toward social security as long as the worker continues to work for the same operator.

He must work 60 days and earn at least $50 in cash every three-month period to get continuous social security credit.

If employers are changed, the work must be regular for three months before it begins to count for social security.

Under the new law a farm worker is defined as one who:

1. Works in planting, cultivating or harvesting any farm crop.
2. Works in raising, processing or delivering crops or livestock to storage or market.
3. Works as a cook or household worker on a farm.
4. Does work of a general nature on a farm.

Husbands, wives, parents or children under 21 years of age of the farm operator cannot get Social Security credit for work done on that farm.

A REGULAR worker on a farm should:

1. Make sure he has a Social Security card.
2. If he has never had one, get it from the local Social Security office in the basement of Circleville postoffice.
3. If he has lost his original card, ask the local office for a new one.
4. Show the social security card to the farm operator by who he is regularly employed. The employer must have the exact name and number as shown on the card in order to report wages every three months.

In January, 1951, the employer will begin to deduct the Social Security tax from wages and add an equal amount as his own payment. Until 1954 the amount of tax will be 1½ cents on each dollar earned.

No Social Security payments can be made until an application has been filed. There are two times for action:

1. When the worker is 65, he should call at the Social Security office and ask about benefits.
2. In case of the worker's death, his family should notify the Social Security office and ask about benefits.

For the self-employed the net income from self-employment after Jan. 1, 1951 will count toward social security benefits if it is $400 or more a year.

A list of some of the trades and businesses in which earnings will count toward old-age and survivors insurance payments are as follows:

Operating a beauty parlor, filling station, barber shop, bar, jewelry shop, laundry, pharmacy, theatre, hotel, flower shop, taxi, tailor shop, tourist court, printing shop, photographic studio, advertising agency, second-hand shop, shoeshine stand, manufacturing plant, real estate agency.

WORKING FOR oneself as a writer, photographer, appraiser, adjuster, artist, private teacher, private detective, independent contractor.

Partners in a business are considered as self-employed. If a person works for someone else and also owns his own business, he will receive credit for both the self-employment income and the wages paid by the employer. The self-employment earnings, however, will count only if they amount to $400 or more in a year.

Earnings over $3,600 in any year will not count toward social security benefits.

Regardless of the amount, the income cannot be counted toward social security benefits if it is earned from self employment as a farm operator, physician, lawyer, dentist, osteopath, chiropractor, optometrist, naturopath, veterinarian, architect, certified public accountant, licensed or registered accountant, fulltime practicing accountant, Christian Science practitioner, professional engineer, or funeral director.

If, however, the person is employed by someone else in any of these professions the wages will count for Social Security purposes.

Earning from real estate will not count toward Social Security unless the earner is in the real estate business.

Income from personally-owned stocks or bonds will not count.

The danger is that in time of war, when dislocations increase and defects can be hidden under the mask of national defense, those who believe that they have been graced with knowledge of how best to benefit the human race will again impose themselves upon us as unerring experts. The danger lies in increased controls, unchecked by Congress. Out of that a Fascist state, by whatever name, could be developed.
